

Standards for Satisfactory Academic Progress

Federal and State financial aid programs mandate that Illinois Wesleyan maintains standards for determining the satisfactory academic progress of its students receiving such aid. These standards are distinct from those used to determine good or probationary academic standing, or disqualification from attendance at the University.

Each academic year a student is enrolled in study, he or she must successfully complete a reasonable number of courses, which would indicate reasonable progress toward completion of all degree requirements within five academic years (ten semesters) of full-time enrollment.

While these Federal and State standards allow for completion of degree requirements over five years, Illinois Wesleyan University expects students to complete their degrees within four years and academic programs are designed to meet this four year goal.
